Ready for Anything

Justin was always prepared. His motto was “never throw anything out, you never know when it might come in handy”. His bedroom was so full of flat bicycle tyres, deflated basketballs, and games with missing pieces that you could barely get in the door. His parents pleaded with him to clean out his room but to no avail. When Justin was away from home, he always carried his blue bag. He liked to think of it as a smaller version of his bedroom - a place to store the many objects that he collected. It was so worn out and old that it hardly looked like a bag any more. It was full of things that seemed unimportant, but when used with imagination could be of use. Justin had earned a reputation of getting people out of otherwise hopeless situations. One day his friend, Kevin lost the paper on which he had written his lockers combination. He was very worried as his important papers were in it. “Relax”, Justin said, taking his back pack (bag) off and unzipping the top. “Remember, you borrowed my notebook to write the combination down? Well, I know how we can recover, what you wrote”. He took the note-book and the soft lead pencil from his bag. The page that Kevin had written on had left faint indentation on another page in the note book. Justin held the pencil on its side and rubbed it lightly over the indentation. Slowly but surely the numbers of the locker combination appeared in white, set off by the grey pencil rubbings. Kevin thanked him and dashed off to get his papers.
